Understanding Human Trafficking

What is Human Trafficking?

Human trafficking violates the sanctity, dignity, and fundamental rights of the human person. The United Nations Protocol to Prevent, Suppress, and Punish Trafficking in Persons defines it as “the recruitment, transportation, harboring or receipt of persons by means of force, fraud or coercion... for the purpose of exploitation.” According to the U.S. State Department, human trafficking appears in “many guises”, often taking the form of commercial sexual exploitation, the prostitution of minors, debt bondage, and involuntary servitude. The United States government, and increasingly the international community, utilize the umbrella term “trafficking in persons” to define all forms of modern slavery.

Every year, millions of men, women and children fall into the hands of traffickers in their own countries and abroad. No sector or industry is immune from human trafficking. Victims may be workers in food processing factories, waiters or cooks at restaurants, construction workers, agricultural laborers, fishers, housekeeping staff at hotels, domestic help in private residences, or sex trafficked women and men in brothels, spas and massage parlors. According to the United Nation’s International Labor Organization’s (ILO) 2016 “Global Estimates of Modern Slavery,” nearly 40.3 million people are victims of modern slavery, of whom 24.9 million are entrapped in forced labor and sexual slavery and 15.4 million subjected to forced marriage. Through coercion, deceit, or force, they are trapped in jobs and situations from which they cannot escape.

Traffickers lure men, women, and children with false promises of good jobs, education, economic security, and love. Once enticed, traffickers keep their victims from seeking help through means such as confiscating identification documents, threats of violence against the victim or their family, and physical or psychological abuse.

The Facts

- Calculated as a 150-billion-dollar industry, trafficking in persons has become the fastest growing source of illicit profit for criminals worldwide.
- There are an estimated 40.3 million victims of human trafficking worldwide. Of these, 25 million are victims of labor or sex trafficking and 15 million are people trapped in forced marriages. Nearly 30% of all victims are men and boys, and an astounding 1 in 4 victims are children.
- Trafficking cases are increasing under COVID-19, as traffickers prey upon people experiencing heightened vulnerabilities linked to pandemic-related lock downs, stay at home orders, job loss, and increased time online.
- Two decades have passed since the United States adopted landmark legislation to combat trafficking. The Trafficking Victims Protection Act (TVPA) of 2000, and its several reauthorizations, defines what constitutes trafficking in the U.S., establishes trafficking as a federal crime, and offers protection for victims and survivors.

- Every year, the State Department issues the Trafficking in Persons Report, a diplomatic tool used to hold accountable government efforts around the world to address human trafficking. The latest edition underscores the important role of faith-based organizations in eradicating trafficking.

The Church's Position on Human Trafficking

- The elimination of human trafficking is a priority issue for the Catholic Church. Because every life is a gift from God and is sacred, it deserves to be protected and nurtured. We each have a responsibility to fight against the violation and degradation of our brothers and sisters. The Vatican released a set of guidelines, or pastoral orientations to help the Catholic community eradicate trafficking.

- The Catechism of the Church forbids acts that cause the enslavement of humans. During the Second Vatican Council in 1965, the Church further stated "slavery, prostitution, the selling of women, and children, and disgraceful working conditions where people are treated as mere tools for profits rather than free and responsible persons are infamies and supreme dishonor to the creator." (Gaudium et Spes, 1965).

- In 2014, Pope Francis stated during his Declaration on the International Day for the Abolition of Slavery: "[M]odern slavery, in terms of human trafficking, forced labor and prostitution, and organ trafficking, is a crime against humanity. Its victims are from all walks of life but are most frequently among the poorest and most vulnerable of our brothers and sisters."

- Men and women religious play an integral part in the battle against human trafficking. In 2001, 800 women leaders of the International Union of Superiors General (UISG) passed a resolution dedicating one million members "to work in solidarity with one another within our own religious communities and in the countries in which we are located to address insistently at every level the abuse and sexual exploitation of women and children..." The U.S. Catholic Sisters against Human Trafficking is the domestic response to this call.

How We End It: By Getting Everyone Involved!

Given that over 51% of people in U.S. attend a faith community, if enough churches synagogues, etc., took effective action, we could end human trafficking. Everyone has a role to play and faith communities can make a big impact. One critical area is being a community for survivors. Many survivors of human trafficking go back “to the life” because they can’t survive financially or have no community that they are part of. Faith communities can invite them to be part of their singles groups, their bible studies, women’s groups etc. where they can make friends. The faith community can help them find jobs, a sitter for their children, etc. There are lots of creative ways to engage our communities as welcoming, supportive spaces for survivors.

Women’s Groups

What if the women’s group in every faith community made it a point to invite someone from a foster care and mentoring agency to come speak at the service and have a table outside to answer questions. Many people are called to be foster/adoptive parents but they have incorrect ideas that are preventing them from acting. Single people think they have to be married (not true). Or people think they can’t work or be a renter and still be a foster parent (neither are true). Or they really want to adopt and add to their family but they can’t afford more children and they think the money stops once they adopt. Once their concerns are addressed, people will often take the next step to foster parent. Given that foster children are a significant percentage of human trafficking victims, foster care parent recruitment is one important action a community can take.

Men’s Groups

Men’s Groups can invite speakers to teach men how to be leaders in the fight. Given how many homes today are without a father figure, male mentors are badly needed. Men can volunteer for their faith community’s youth group and share with both young boys and young women what respect looks like between the sexes. Men’s groups can take on equipping men to be good husbands and fathers. This often takes the form of a support group which men find invaluable.

Youth Groups

The youth love raising awareness. They could host a Fair Trade table that people could visit after the service with products people buy all the time like coffee, tea and chocolate and tell people where they can buy them. If they did this once per year, eventually that faith community would be a fair trade church/synagogue. The youth group could also invite other youth to their meetings. This would make a huge difference for at risk youth. They could engage in community service projects together including raising money or collecting goods for a local survivor shelter. The youth pastor can set up both parent and teen trainings at their church about online safety and how to prevent human trafficking.

Senior Groups

Senior groups often have people in them that are former executives or other business professionals. As a result, they often possess many skill sets that can be used to create a fundraiser for a non-profit or organize other types of programs and awareness raising events. They could host a letter-writing Sunday on a topic connected to human trafficking. It empowers people to provide an opportunity for them to make a difference.

Engaging Men is the Key to Ending Sex Trafficking

Men are the main buyers of sex. If there was no more sex buying, there would be no more sex trafficking! What it will take to have men stop buying sex is to engage them so that they educate each other that the majority of prostituted people are victims of sex trafficking. Check out this video on the topic and hear from men who are leading this work: <https://youtu.be/aKYJI2KhSU8>

Men need to hold one another accountable to end the demand. Through God's Grace hosts discussion/work groups for Engaging Men in the Fight Against Human Trafficking. This is a work group for men who are leaders in engaging other men in the fight against human trafficking or for men who want to become leaders. TAKE ACTION – Advocacy Alerts

Renew the Trafficking Victims Prevention and Protection Reauthorization Act of 2021

Please urge your Representative to co-sponsor the Frederick Douglass Trafficking Victim Prevention and Protection Reauthorization Act of 2021 (TVPPRA) HR 5150 bill. Programs that are currently being funded by the previous TVPA are set to expire soon. It is critical that this legislation is brought to Congress before survivors lose access to these much-needed services.

The bill will reauthorize vital programs across a wide coalition of U.S. government departments that address human trafficking at an estimated cost of 1.6 billion dollars. The TVPPRA 2021 will enhance successful programs such as prevention of online child trafficking, it will strengthen laws to convict sex traffickers domestically and internationally, protect victims and witnesses during investigations, provide restitution for survivors, prevent unfair sentencing of youthful offenders who were victims of trafficking, and provide stricter sanctions for countries on Tier 3 of the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Report. The bill also adds accountability for the U.S. and Federal and foreign governments, hotels, and airlines through anti-trafficking training and codes of conduct for their staff; transparency in anti-trafficking expenditures, and permanently incorporates the U.S. Advisory Council on Human Trafficking as part of the U.S. commitment to survivor informed policy. You can easily send a letter to your Representative through our online campaign here:

<https://sistersagainsttrafficking.salsalabs.org/TVPPRAReauthorization/index.html>

Connect With Your Legislators

Reach out to your local and national legislators to let them know you care about ending human trafficking and supporting survivors! You can use our helpful intro packet that explains the connections between human trafficking and other justice issues like gender equality, economics, racism, climate change, and immigration. You can also use our website to look up the contact information for your local and national legislators if you don't already know it! Find these great advocacy resources and more here:

Write a Letter to the Editor or Op-Ed about Human Trafficking

Writing a letter to the editor (also known as an LTE) is a great way to offer a rebuttal, add another perspective, or just express your appreciation for an already-published article or commentary piece that relates to human trafficking. Both local and national legislators also read LTEs to keep their finger on the pulse of their community. A well-written LTE can not only inform your neighbors about human trafficking, but can also influence your legislators.

Or write an Op-Ed. These articles generally come from an author not affiliated with the publisher and present an opinion that is meant to create thought and discussion among readers. Op-Eds are usually longer than letters to the editor and are written by an expert or otherwise notable person with the qualifications to have an opinion on that subject matter. Find tips for writing LTEs and Op-Eds here:

Ethical Shopping to Combat Slavery & Promote Creation Care

When we shop are we supporting slavery? Are we creating a burden on the environment?

These are questions that are starting to weigh on many of us as we hear more about the prevalence of slavery in our world. Think about the hands that created your clothes or harvested your food. Were they children? Did they suffer? How much pollution and waste was produced in the manufacturing process?

In order to produce goods cheaply and quickly, companies may be giving up ethical and environmental measures to meet the demand for cheaper products. Ethical or Fair Trade represents an employment or trade relationship based on the treatment of workers, artisans and farmers, providing fair wages, safer working conditions and consideration to the community and environment. Fair Trade certification and the adoption of ethical standards secures the rights of workers, reduces poverty and promotes sustainable development. When consumers choose fair trade or ethically sourced products, they create demand for more products that do not involve child labor and instead support the workers while providing safe and sustainable employment.

These are things we want to consider as conscientious consumers. We have the power to support greater causes through our purchases. Below are ways to shop ethically to support people and the earth.

How to Shop & Consume Ethically

READ LABELS

To ensure the product you purchase is not made by child labor or slave trade, reading labels can guide you in seeking ethically sourced products that support the people and the environment where the item originates. Although a number of fair trade certification agencies and standards exist, you can simply google most companies to find out more about their specific standards with respect to the environment and child labor practices even if they are not fair trade certified. Look for the company's 'sustainability' report.

Here are some third-party organization labels that indicate ethical policies are in place:

LOOK FOR PRODUCTS MADE BY SURVIVORS

By purchasing items created by survivors of violence and human trafficking, you provide survivors a head start on a new life and from falling back into the hands of traffickers or their abuser. Many victims are exploited as children and have little formal education, so they must build skills to gain sustainable income. Survivors often do this through the creation and sale of hand-crafted goods.

Find a list of survivor made products on the USCSAHT website here:

<https://sistersagainsttrafficking.org/education/survivor-made-products/>

SHOP WITH HELPING ORGANIZATIONS

SERRV International is a nonprofit online store dedicated to fighting global poverty through ethical trade. More than 8,000 artisans and farmers in 25 countries are empowered by sustainable employment, fair wages and safe working conditions where they find security and dignity in their work and are able to send their children to school.

Important Dates and Events

National Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention Month

Since 2010, January has been declared National Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention Month by presidential proclamation. This is an excellent opportunity for all of us to raise awareness about human trafficking, particularly how this crime can be prevented.

In the upcoming weeks, we encourage you to undertake efforts to educate communities on human trafficking. In doing so, you can also promote promising practices to help advance anti-trafficking initiatives in your own neighborhood, town, or city.

JANUARY 5: USCSAHT Webinar on Cyber Safety

Cyber Safety: More than meets the eye – an online webinar via Zoom at 1:00pm EST. Help USCSAHT kick off National Human Trafficking Awareness Month by getting informed on Cyber Safety. A great webinar for parents, teachers, and grandparents! Technology is not the enemy. But the reality is that our kid's vulnerabilities can and are being exploited online. JANUARY 9: Virtual Prayer Vigil

The Boston Anti-Trafficking Coalition is hosting their annual Prayer Vigil on January 9, 2022 in support of National Human Trafficking Awareness Day and Month. Because of the continued uncertainty regarding Covid-19 and the new variant, and cautions about in-person gathering, we are once again hosting a virtual prayer service to be held at 1:00 pm EST on January 9 via ZOOM. Although we will not gather in person, we will post the STOP HUMAN TRAFFICKING banner for the entire month of January outside the motherhouse of the Sisters of St. Joseph on Cambridge Street. We are very grateful to the Sisters of St. Joseph for posting this sign as a witness to our collective prayers and advocacy! More information about this event will follow in early January, with a link to the Zoom account for participating. JANUARY 11: National Human Trafficking Awareness Day

This day seeks to increase understanding among Americans that human trafficking happens in states and communities across the United States. Human trafficking is a form of modern-day slavery and occurs when a trafficker uses force, fraud or coercion to control another person for the purpose of engaging in commercial sex acts or soliciting labor or services against his/her will. One easy way to raise awareness today is to wear blue and post a photo of yourself on social media with the hashtag #WearBlueDay!

JANUARY 29: The Impact of Legalizing Prostitution on the Black Community

Hosted by the National Black Faith Coalition Against Human Trafficking. Several U.S. States have bills that are being discussed to decriminalize prostitution. Those in the anti-human trafficking community are against this because when prostitution is decriminalized, sex buying explodes creating a vacuum that the human traffickers fill by finding more victims. The panel of black leaders will equip the audience on what they can do to raise awareness and to be effective advocates to stop this trend to decriminalize prostitution that will have devastating consequences for the black community. Please join on January 29th at 11am EST for this all important topic.

February 8: World Day of Prayer, Reflection, and Action Against Human Trafficking & the Feast Day of St. Josephine Bakhita

Background:

With encouragement from Pope Francis, the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace and the International Union of Superiors General designated February 8th as an annual day of prayer, reflection, and action against human trafficking. On this day, we remember and pray for survivors and victims of modern-day slavery. We pray that we may work together to remove the causes of this disgraceful scourge that is present in all our cities and neighborhoods. This day is also one of awareness and action: our prayers are strengthened three-fold when we accompany them with a willingness to become aware of the problem and become involved in erasing this evil.

February 8th is also the feast day of St. Josephine Bakhita. Born in the Darfur region of Sudan in 1869, St. Bakhita was kidnapped and enslaved as a child. Eventually she was sold to an Italian diplomat and taken to Italy, where she valiantly asserted her freedom with the help of the Cannossian Sisters of Venice. Through her faith, St. Bakhita realized the promise of liberty inherent in the human spirit. She lived out the rest of her life as a Cannossian sister, sharing her empowering testimony of human freedom and dignity. In 2000, Pope John Paul II canonized Josephine Bakhita, noting that in this saint, “we find a shining advocate of genuine emancipation.”

On February 8th, Catholics around the world are encouraged to host or attend prayer services to generate greater awareness about human trafficking. Through prayer, we not only reflect on the experiences of those that have suffered through this affront to human dignity but also comfort, strengthen, and help empower survivors. As Bishop Eusebio Elizondo, Auxiliary Bishop of Seattle stated, “On [February 8th], we will lift our voices loudly in prayer, hope, and love for trafficking victims and survivors. If just one person realizes from this day that they or someone they know is being trafficked, we will have made a difference.”

February 8: 8th International Day of Prayer and Awareness against Trafficking in Persons

The Power of Care

Women, Economics, Human Trafficking

The theme of the eighth International Day of Prayer and Awareness Against Trafficking in Persons is “The Power of Care - Women, Economics, Human Trafficking”.

Trafficking is one of the deepest wounds inflicted by the current economic system. Wounds that affect all dimensions of life, personal and community. The pandemic has increased the “business” of human trafficking and has exacerbated the pain: it has favored the opportunities and socio-economic mechanisms underlying this scourge, worsening the situations of vulnerability that involved the people most at risk—disproportionately women and girls. The latter, particularly penalized by the dominant economic model. The gap between men and women has thus grown.

According to the United Nations Strategic Plan 2022-2025 “Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women)”¹ with a general improvement in the condition of women globally, until the arrival of the pandemic, inequalities in all the most important areas of life: health, work, education and politics remain significant. Below, some unequivocal data:

- the participation rate, between the ages of 25-54, in the workforce is 90% for men and just under two thirds for women;
- for 2.7 million women there are important legal obstacles, as well as cultural, to equal employment opportunities.
- the global wage gap between women and men is estimated at 23%;
- women do three times more unpaid domestic and care work than men;
- women aged 25-34 have a much higher risk of poverty than men. The economic fallout is expected to push an additional 47 million women and girls into extreme poverty in 2021, reversing decades of progress.
- in parliaments, on average, women represent only a quarter of the seats;
- 30% of young women do not study, do not work, do not follow any training courses (while for young men it is 13%); two thirds of illiterate people in the world, are women;
- 245 million women and girls over 15 have suffered physical and/or sexual violence by their partner in the last year;

- only 13% of the anti-COVID fiscal, labor and social protection measures concerned the economic security of women.

According to the United Nations statistics on trafficking in persons (2020 UNODC Global Report on Trafficking in Persons) women and girls represent 72% of identified victims of trafficking and the percentage of women and girls increases significantly in the context of trafficking for sexual exploitation; a market that represents 2/3 of the profits generated by exploitation.²

Faced with the failure of economic models based on exploitation, women are called to take on a leading role as agents of change to create an economic system based on caring for people and the common home, involving everyone. Care is a lifestyle and is Jesus' way of loving, as he proposes to us in the parable of the Good Samaritan (Lk 10: 25-37), taken up by Pope Francis in his Encyclical Letter Fratelli Tutti. We have to take care to transform our relationship with nature and social and economic relationships, which too often are centered on an aggressive competition that impedes all forms of cooperation and respect for human dignity.

The empowerment of women is not only a question of justice in terms of equal opportunities, but also of expanding the capacity of human resources. With a greater involvement of women, new social and economic processes can be fostered: various development agents open new horizons to development itself. A system that excludes women, and other vulnerable social groups, is not only an "inequitable" system, but also an "inefficient" one, because it does not maximize its capacity to promote integral human development.

With the pandemic, the society and institutions have rediscovered the value of caring for people as a pillar of security and social cohesion and the commitment to care for the common space in order to mitigate the adverse effects of climate change and environmental degradation, which mainly affects the poorer.

The power of care is the only way to tackle human trafficking and all forms of exploitation.

Catholic Social Teaching

"One of the most troubling of those open wounds (in the world) is the trade in human beings, a modern form of slavery. It violates the God-given dignity of so many of our brothers and sisters and constitutes a true crime against humanity." — Pope Francis, November 7, 2016

"It is a sin against the dignity of persons and their fundamental rights to reduce them by violence to their productive value or to a source of profit." — Catechism, pp 2414

"Whatever insults human dignity, such as... slavery, prostitution, the selling of women and children; as well as disgraceful working conditions, where men are treated as mere tools for profit, rather than as free and responsible persons; all these things and others of their like are infamies indeed... they are supreme dishonor to the Creator." — Gaudium et Spes, 1965

"Human trafficking is a horrific crime against the basic dignity and rights of the human person. All efforts must be expended to end it. In the end, we must work together—Church, state, and community—to eliminate the root causes and markets that permit traffickers to flourish; to make whole the survivors of this crime; and to ensure that, one day soon, trafficking in human persons vanishes from the face of the earth." — USCCB, On Human Trafficking, 2007

"How I wish that all of us would hear God's cry: "Where is your brother?" (Gen 4:9). Where is your brother or sister who is enslaved? Where is the brother and sister whom you are killing each day in clandestine warehouses, in rings of prostitution, in children used for begging, in exploiting undocumented labour? Let us not look the other way. There is greater complicity than we think." — Evangelii Gaudium, Pope Francis

Reflection & Prayer to End Human Trafficking

January 11 – February 8, 2022

St. Josephine Bakhita was born in southern Sudan in 1869. As a young girl, she was kidnapped and sold into slavery. She was treated brutally by her captors as she was sold and resold. She did not remember her name; Bakhita, which means “fortunate one,” was the name given to her by her kidnappers.

Daily Prayer

God of hope and peace, touch our hearts and energize our ongoing efforts in abolishing this heinous crime against humanity so that every victim is freed and every survivor’s life renewed. You blessed St. Josephine Bakhita of Sudan with compassion for others. May her prayers comfort and strengthen the women, men and children who are in search of freedom. (Say appropriate daily prayer)

We ask for transformation of heart for those who inflict pain, anguish and grief on our vulnerable sisters and brothers. Give us generosity to stand in solidarity with others so that together we heal the hearts and lives of all Your people.

Grant this through our Lord Jesus Christ, Your Son, who lives and reigns with You and the Holy Spirit, One God, Forever and ever. Amen.

11 National Human Trafficking Awareness Day We pray for the women, men and children who have been dehumanized through abuse, degradation and exploitation.		12 We pray for the vulnerable migrants at our borders who are exposed to the danger of being trafficked.	13 We pray for those who commit collectively and tirelessly to end the enslavement of women, men and children.	14 We pray for the young women who are offered waitressing jobs in the city, but instead are sent to night clubs and coerced into sex slavery.
15 We pray leaders employ migration policies that grant migrants their fundamental and human rights.	16 We pray for the children and young adults in foster care as they are highly vulnerable to being trafficked.	17 We pray for women in Central America and the Caribbean where girls are victims of trafficking for sexual exploitation.	18 We pray for African boys as young as 12 who are enslaved in dangerous work in cocoa farms in the Ivory Coast.	19 We pray for the innocent young victims who are dropped off at shopping malls to meet with their friends.
20 We pray that today we start questioning who makes the clothes we wear and where they come from.	21 We pray for parents who think their kids are safe and protected just because they are home with their electronic devices.	22 We pray for those who work excessively long hours and are forced to live at their place of work.	23 We pray for the young victims of armed groups who traffic children for armed combat, forced marriage and sexual exploitation.	24 We pray for that young woman who is coerced by her boyfriend to take the suspicious job she was offered.
25 We pray for the predators. May they be touched by God’s love and their hearts transformed.	26 We pray that chocolate companies move forward to eradicate child labor from their West African cocoa suppliers.	27 We pray for nannies and domestic workers who often work for very low wages under abusive working conditions.	28 We pray for the victims who are brainwashed and see their trafficker as a protector from their families and law enforcement.	29 We pray for the victims of forced labor or sexual slavery who live in isolation and feel ashamed to tell someone.
30 We pray for girls and young women in the Middle East and Africa who are forced to marry and subjected to sexual exploitation.	31 We pray for the men who are hired in restaurants and are forced to work excessive hours, few breaks and no pay.	1 We pray for the parents of the missing child who was taken by a stranger he met through online gaming.	2 Super Bowl Sunday We pray that people attending the Super Bowl call to report any suspicious behavior.	3 We pray for those who work to eliminate the social and economic factors that contribute to human trafficking.
4 We pray for the women and men who have been raped and are afraid to come forward in fear of being judged and/or blamed.	5 We pray that the neighbor who witnesses children doing mostly housework and not attend school to contact the authorities.	6 We pray for the vulnerable victims who are enslaved by their romantic partners or spouses.	7 We pray for migrant and seasonal farmworkers and their families who are often victims of labor trafficking in harvesting crops.	8 Feast of St. Josephine Bakhita We pray for the freedom of all who are enslaved. May they find courage and hope in their lives.
